

NEW YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent. New York, Nov. 28, 1868. Thanksgiving Day in New York was neither more nor less than usual. Turkeys were eaten, likewise ducks and currant jelly. Old friends shook hands and forgave each other recent differences, and Horace Greeley brought a surfeit upon himself by eating raw turnips at Delmonico's. At the Home for the Friendless and the Asylum for Incurables (where Seymour and Blair have been entered) the books, at the Newboys' Lodging House, and the Home for Little Wanderers, and the Indigent Widows' Bunking Saloon, and Valetudinarian Villa Thanksgiving victuals were spread in profusion, and as profusely eaten. Those three well-known Shakespearean characters, Good Digestion, Appetite, and Health, went bumping around the city, making promiscuous calls. There was a good deal of tall talk in the pulpits, and an immense amount of the kind of gratitude which evidences itself in a affecting sense of future favors on hand, as it usually is. Charity, however, was as cold as she generally is on charitable occasions, and ended where she usually begins—at home. POOR ORPHANS. The Irish Giant, in a peck of trouble again. It is a pity that his peck of trouble is not a peck of dirt, that he might sit down and eat it all at once. The Governor of Massachusetts desires possession of his body, and consequently the exertions of the New York police were unwontedly alert, until a late hour yesterday morning on the lookout for that fearful and wonderful assemblage of bone, nerve, muscle, ligament, tendon, vein, artery, flesh, and blood. The death of his late bondsman, Felix Larkin, the particulars of which have long ere this reached Philadelphia readers, caused the rumor that the ball given was worthless. The real reason of the police vigilance, however, is the desire of Massachusetts to banish prize-fighters from the face of the earth. Heaven and the Hub are alike in this particular, that pacemakers (including Grant) are appreciated there. And speaking of Grant reminds me that, if for no other reason, Forton's "Does the Coming Man drink wine?" disappears of him for President because he is the slave of smoke. ISAAC W. ENGLAND, managing editor of the Sun, is doing a good thing in prosecuting the policemen who refused to arrest the Hegeman drug-clerk who assaulted him a week or so ago, while they were in a state of drunkenness. Officer McComb, one of these policemen, subsequently visited England in his office, and tried to persuade him to stop the prosecution. Finding entirely in vain, the treacherous bully threatened him that he would prove (by perjury, of course) that England was drunk at the time of his arrest. Being a little acquainted with England's personal habits, I might add that a man less inclined to take an overdose of intoxicating liquor I never met. A BIG BAZAAR is going to be opened at the Central Park Garden, where Theodore Thomas has been concertizing all summer and autumn. The bazaar will only last through the Christmas season, and you may rest assured very big game people will go there! The present will be held to music (not Thomas' orchestra though), and purchasers will take in at the ear all that they give out at the purse. At least, it is pleasant for one's plans of economy to believe so. THE VELOCIPEDS, whose advent I first wrote about some months ago is becoming popular. Indeed, a fashion-course of velocipedists is being established at Central Park. A few novelties in the way of AMUSEMENTS are talked of. For instance, at Wood's Museum a new burlesque called "The Pimp's Hair," founded on Lord Lytton's "The Pimp's Hair," is to appear through the holidays. To this will succeed early in the spring the Kirby Family, composed of two males and ten females. They may not be much, but they have a smack of originality about them, and when the public's check is thus marked "none, it always turns the other also. ALESSANDRO BORTTI, the new "Mexican" tenor, made his debut on Thanksgiving night at the Academy, in "Uta Balto in Maschera." His high notes are sweet, and his low ones weak. He acts with nerve and is what the ladies call a "cunning" little tenor. Few Americans are familiar with the name of Miss Marriott, yet she is, in truth, one of the best of the few good English actresses, and is making arrangements to appear in this city early during the coming year, probably in January, though the scene of her debut has not been absolutely determined upon. A TRAINING SCHOOL FOR SERVANTS is the last novelty talked of. In fact, a remedy is needed for those young husbands who are always reminding their wives what their mothers used to make. Taking all things into consideration, I am inclined to think that these old mothers (whose pies and puddings are remembered with a sort of mournful month-yearning after they themselves are in their graves) have the best of the argument, and that these training-schools and co-operative housekeeping schemes will windle away into the present dimensions of the Sorosis. ALI BABA. MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC. The City Amusements. AT THE WALNUT this evening the Philadelphia Fire Zouaves will have a benefit. The entertainment will consist with the comedy of the Serious Family, after which there will be a grand exhibition drill by Company A, of the Fire Zouave Regiment, Captain John A. Ryan commanding. The programme for the drill is as follows:—Company movements, manual of arms by command, manual of arms by taps, loading and firing by command, military drill and bayonet exercise. The performance will conclude with the farce of the Spectre Bridgroom. If the programme does not insure a full house, we don't know what would. On Monday Mrs. D. P. Bowers will commence an engagement, and will appear in John Bromberg's drama of "Lady Arden's Secret." AT THE CHESTNUT the drama of "How for Blow" will be given for the last time this evening. On Monday the equestrian season will commence, and from present appearances, it promises to be a success. There are an immense number of persons whose tastes incline them to the circus, and a first-class troupe like the one announced to appear at the Chestnut will be likely to create something of a sensation, and fill the house from parquette to dome every evening. Mr. James Robinson is probably without a rival in the world as a rider, and we will have besides him a full corps of performers, all celebrated in their particular lines of business. AT THE ARCH Mr. Barton Hill will have a benefit this evening, when he will present the comedy of "A Lesson in Love" and the drama of the Three Guardsmen. Mr. Hill is an able and conscientious artist, and we hope that his claims on the consideration of the public will be recognized by an overflowing house this evening. On Monday the comedy of "The Way to Keep Him" will be performed. AT THE AMERICAN Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Blanchard, with their trained dogs, Vivian, the comic vocalist, Marie Venierol, the graceful danseuse, and a host of other artists will appear this evening. AT THE THEATRE COMIQUE Madie Gertrude will be performing. The miniature drama of the three flying men of the sea, the drama of "The Gathering of the Clouds," and a great variety of other features, make the most attractive entertainment, which makes everybody feel as if they had got their money's worth and something more. GAMBRETT and Mark Hassler's orchestra will give a performance at Musical Fund Hall this afternoon. Miss Kellogg will give her last concert at Concert Hall this afternoon, and in bidding her farewell we can only regret that her stay in Philadelphia has been so short, and hope that we shall have the pleasure of seeing her soon again. Mr. MAX MARSTENK will commence his season of grand opera on Monday under the most favorable auspices. We understand that most of the seats are already sold, and the extraordinary success of the season being assured in advance will inspire the manager and the artists to put forth all their powers to make it a success artistically. It therefore will be given on Monday. DRY GOODS. JOHN BURNS, No. 347 SOUTH ELEVENTH STREET, ABOVE SPRUCE. NEW STOCK. NEW YORK PRICES.
